Art, science Jerome, Jas Roberts, J W Ward, and business open the door to her, but she must not touch polities. There isn't any well founded reason (if there is, I've never met, with it) why she shouldn't; the only objection being that she is a woman. The negro, the savage, yea, even the white man who hardly knows beans from buck shot, may help run the government under which she lives; but she, whose interests are so much at stake as any one's, must keep out of it. Minors, idiots, criminals and women are left out. The inspired writer says: "In your patience possess ye your souls." I wonder if he was thinking of this? In consideration of the laws of heredity, woman should be man's equal in the fullest possible sense. Every faculty of her mind should be as fully developed as his, if the two are to be a well rounded and perfect one. Nature is beginning to be good to us again. We have a day now and then when the wind doesn't blow. Some very promising clouds came up to-day, but they seemed to have business elsewhere and so passed over. This has been the warmest day in the year. Oats have headed and will soon be ready to cut. Early oru, that was cut struggling for existence. our ranchman plowed up his early potatoes and planted others. They had been frost bitten so often that he gave them up in despair. The health of the valley is good with the exception of whooping cough among the children. This valley has enough of good health to starve a haif dozen doctors to death.
